Dear Sharon

Further to my previous reply I have now read through the HIA document and I can confirm that it is fit for purpose. Impacts to the existing structures will clearly be minimal and have been fully addressed in the HIA table stating appropriate mitigation actions. Cadw will largely take the lead on this initial phase of the restoration project as the structures affected are wholly within the scheduled area.

We note that some areas of the works require limited sub-surface investigation during removal of floor materials, particularly in the Agent's House and the Foundry and Casting House and these will require archaeological monitoring via a watching brief. This has already been agreed and a WSI (Specification for Archaeological Assessment and Programme of Investigation) was submitted in September 2019 by Archaeodomus. This WSI is approved and will be taken forward as the scheme progresses.

The archaeological mitigation for the proposed restoration is therefore well addressed in these proposals and the project as a whole will help to preserve and interpret these remains for the wider public.

Further comments should be sought from Cadw and the Built Heritage Conservation Officer.

Kind regards

Mark Walters
