Annex VII: Images of Offa's Dyke

When properly maintained and cared for, some areas of Offa's Dyke look absolutely magnificent:

Its functionality is clearly visible when it is possible to see the delineation of both the dyke and the mound.

Unfortunately, at the current time, Offa's Dyke is completely unrecognisable as it runs along the western boundary of Oak Court Farm:

The view of the Dyke from just outside the boundary is unclear at best. One can just about make out the fact that there is a rise, or mound, but nothing of Offa's Dyke's former glory is visible at all. (This picture also provides evidence of the atrocious state of these neglected fields, which are overrun with weeds.)

The applicants sincerely hope that Scheduled Monument Consent will be granted for the restorative grazing of goats along the Offa's Dyke route on the landholding, so that the local community, and visitors from further afield, can once again enjoy an unspoiled view of this historic national treasure.
