The Highway Authority are in the main satisfied with the responses provided in response to the queries raised by However in relation to the query concerning the junction modelling and validation, I do not feel that the response fully addresses the concerns raised. Transport models that do not fully reflect observed traffic conditions are open to criticism and will inevitably provide any objectors with the opportunity to question the validity of the outputs. This would be very difficult for a Highways Officer to defend under examination. I would suggest that the traffic consultants re-look at the model and attempt to produce outputs that are reflective of on-site traffic conditions.
