The above photos clearly indicate the access and track from A539 Llangollen Road into the field, these photos range from 1951 – 1993. The route of the access and slope of the access is clearly defined in each of the pictures.

The following set of photos show images of the land to confirm that, in all of these aerial photographs, it is clearly visible that the field in question is managed agricultural land. There are visible tractor marks throughout the field, confirming the land has regularly been worked and also shows managed grassland. It is clearly evident in the photos that the access is existing.

From the imagery provided it is evident that access to the field, which shown in the photos have seen varying types of crop use and harvest has been in regular use up until the very recent past. The access has been tidied up where some of the hedge growth that had overgrown over the last few years has now been attended to. This arrangement where maintenance has been slightly neglected is no different from other similar boundaries and hedges in the nearby vicinity. Unfortunately a family bereavement has meant the field has not been used as much over the last couple of years.
