Details of the pre-application advice received

Based upon the information submitted as part of this enquiry, I can confirm that a formal planning application would need to be submitted to the council.
In terms of acceptability, there would be no objections to the principle of the proposal. The width of the new extension would be less than half the width of the original property, and less than half the width of the garden plot between the dwelling and the adjacent highway. The proposed new roof would be pitched, match the original property and be lower than the original roof ridge line. There are already dwellings within the street scene that have two storey side extensions.
However, without any formal plans, it is difficult to comment fully on the acceptability of the proposal regarding visual and residential amenities and the full impact would need to be assessed as part of a site visit should a planning application be submitted.
